INTRODUCTION

A FRIEND of mine, an artist, once realized that there was a singular lack of correspondence between his drawings and the objects which they were supposed to represent. This, judging by the drawings one sees, was either an exceptional piece of insight, indicating genius in the artist, or it was a knowledge which many artists heroically ignore when it comes to themselves. My friend, at any rate, marvelled at the discrepancy ; and he blamed his fingers. They, he decided, were inexpert. They were the traitors. They could not reproduce exactly what he with delicate perceptiveness saw before him. For a time the artist tried very hard to improve his draughtsmanship. And then, suddenly, his mind leapt to a truth. He discovered that his eye, and not his hand, was at fault. In making this discovery he crossed the chasm which divides the eternal amateur from the professional—or, at least, the non-artist from the artist. To parallel this from a craft with which I am more familiar, perhaps I may say that many of those who justifiably and with much assurance criticize over the tea-cups the way in which novels are written do in the same degree fail when they essay the task of writing novels. They do not know enough. They are explanatory when they should be vivid ; they narrate when they should picture. Conscious of the defects of the books they read, conscious at last of the botch they have themselves committed, they suppose the deficiencies of which they become aware to be due to lack of executive skill. It is not so. The fact is, we can most of us roughly and crudely appraise the truth or untruth of a picture—whether it is in line or in word ; but when it comes to the point of expression we are betrayed, not by our technical unskilfulness, but by our simple ignorance of what is passing all around us. Our ignorance is stupendous. We travel every day, perhaps, in omnibuses and trains and tram-cars ; but our ear is not quick enough to catch varying tones and accents, and our eye is not quick enough to perceive—let alone to record—all the strange things which lie everywhere before it. When we hear a first-class mimic, who emphasises significant features of dialect by selecting and, as it were, abstracting them from the general medley of speech ; or when we see one of Mr. George Belcher's drawings, which does exactly the same thing in line, we are instantly conscious in a high degree of the pleasures of recognition. We exclaim with delight. We appreciate the truth of Mr. Belcher's drawings and their humour. We begin to look out for more of his work, and to delight in its aptness, its apparent carelessness of execution, the familiarity of the faces he pictures. And by concentrating upon Mr. Belcher's fine skill we do less than justice to the much finer perception which lies behind all the seeming ease of his work, and which distinguishes him from so many of his fellow-craftsmen.

I can remember walking along the sands of an East Coast seaside resort with a man who is, I believe, by common consent the most observant writer now alive. I saw a great many things, and remarked upon them. He also saw a great many things, and remarked upon them. We had an exceedingly pleasant stroll, and as we returned homewards my friend suggested that we might be said to have "seen" Frinton-on-Sea. But the truth was that he had seen the place in relation to some thousands of highly expert understandings which were entirely unknown to me. I had seen with my eyes and my experience; but while my eyes were perhaps not inferior to my friend's eyes, my experience, the power which transmutes all observation, was by comparison contemptible. It is this experience, this power to associate, to fuse, to detach every piece of observation, which is the rare faculty. It comes from a natural sensitiveness which has been cultivated and matured over a long period of incessant attention to the spectacle of life. Observation is only significant by virtue of its associations. We can recognize and appreciate the results of observation in others, but few can claim to have the sort of creative observation which is the source of this delight. We can thus enumerate details; but we cannot eliminate them, as Mr. Belcher does. We should not dare to do so, for elimination is only permitted to those who are so sure of their facts that they can dispense with proofs and authorities and confirmations.

Take any one of the best of the drawings in this book. Take, for example, that scene in an eating-house where it is suggested that tripe is less stringy if not eaten through a veil; or that other scene where protest is being made as to a knife which is unsuitable for the eating of peas. Forget the peas and the tripe. What remains in each case? Two entirely human people are engaged in the familiar act of eating. We can imagine the food and the facial performance of the eaters. The picture needs no "legend." It speaks for itself. It also appeals to the imagination of the beholder. Many artists, perhaps, could have illustrated either joke in a way to make us laugh; but Mr. Belcher does something more. He presents us in each case with a picture of real life, which is not merely a transcript. It is a clean and vigorous rendering of a class. A writer of the same calibre as Mr. Belcher might give us a similarly selective and concise record of the conversation of this pair throughout the meal; but Mr. Belcher makes further information about them superfluous, for he enables us to imagine the scene for ourselves.

It is not, in fact, in the actual jokes that the excellence of the present collection lies. Many of them could have been used by artists inferior to Mr. Belcher. What Mr. Belcher needs, however, is an occasion for the showing of two human beings in conversation. Give him that, and the story arises naturally. Granted an interchange of appropriate remarks, these two living creatures are so accurately seen that they can be rendered with an air (it is only an air) of inattentiveness, and with that added lustre of peculiarity which comes from the artist's wit and his sense of the grotesque in nature. It is a twist, an emphasis, that makes the people in the drawings start out as "characters." They are not drawn flat or finite; they hardly ever fail to suggest all sorts of thoughts and suppositions and humorous notions which certainly are not supplied by the printed words beneath the drawings. It is as if, in opening this book, we found the world transfigured—re-peopled with comic characters that we have unconsciously known all our lives, as we know the comic characters in literature. These people have been in being all the time. We have seen them in the past—yesterday—to-day. And Mr. Belcher has made them spring into memory and knowledge by creating them for us. To those who will spend time and a little of that agreeable rambling speculation which is permitted to the fancy, the book will provide material for a host of life stories. It could not do so if the drawings, beneath their wit, had not a permanent basis of steady observation. Each character here is not only an individual but an epitome.

Drawings, I think, are often strong—stronger than paintings—in this power to awaken and to encourage speculation. Their suggestive power is incalculable. For years I have cherished a collection of small books called “ Drawings by Great Masters,” and these little books never fail to produce in me an absorbed imagining—an awareness of life not so much in a fragmentary state as seized by an eye which by intuitive vision and experience has made a scene quick with significance. The thing has been detached from the general chiaroscuro, and it is rich in suggestion—in the apparently careless freedom of a sudden gesture. Well, is not Mr. Belcher in just this way presenting us here with something akin to a book of “ Drawings by a Great Master ” ? Take his picture of the poor woman who is upon the wrong omnibus and who wants to go to Peckham ; take the lady who is talking to her page in “ A Dog’s Life ” ; or take that other lady who, upon a cold morning, is glad that she decided to wear her furs. Each of these is a highly finished portrait. It can be admired as a portrait. But it is also, in its way, the beginning of a novel to be written by the beholder. As one looks at the picture one’s imagination begins to weave the social background, to create the proposed destination of the woman on the omnibus, the ménage of the lady with the fur, the character of the lady with the dog. The fact that one has been first amused by recognition becomes negligible. Then only is it made quite clear why Mr. Belcher’s book has been named “ Characters,” and not “ Individuals ” or “ People.” The individual, it is true, is rendered ; but not alone the individual. There is more to Mr. Belcher’s gift than that. He takes common life and he makes it humane. It is the work of a distinguished talent, and it is now, as always, upon a highly distinguished work that this talent is engaged. It is nothing less than the humane re-discovery of a world that our unobservant eyes would otherwise contrive to ignore. It is the creation of a new world of familiar characters.

I WISH to acknowledge my indebtedness to the Proprietors of "Punch" for kindly allowing me to reproduce some of the drawings in this book which originally appeared in that paper.

I also wish to thank the Proprietor of "The Tatler" for the help they have extended to me in bringing together the drawings which originally appeared in the "Tatler's" pages.

Jones (giving up his flat) : " YES, I SHALL SELL THESE WITH THE REST. "

Charlady : " OH, SIR, IT DO SEEM A SHAME TO PART WITH YER ANCESTORS. "

"I DON'T 'OLD WITH THIS 'ERE VACCINATION, MRS. GREEN. WHAT'S VACCINATION DONE FOR MY LITTLE TOMMY? SINCE I 'AD 'IM DONE 'E'S 'AD WHOOPING-COUGH, CHICKEN-POX, MEASLES—IN FACT, EVERYTHINK BUT SMALL-POX!"

Mrs. Brown (to Mrs. Jones, who has also been to see a son off in a troopship) :
"WELL, I'M SURE THEY'LL BE STARTING SOON, BECAUSE BOTH FUNNELS ARE SMOKING; AND, YOU SEE, MY DEAR, THEY COULDN'T WANT BOTH FUNNELS JUST FOR LUNCH."

THE EPICURE!

First Lady : " NICE BIT ER TRIPE, AIN'T IT ? "

Second Lady : " WELL, MINE'S A BIT STRINGY. "

First Lady : " TRY IT WITH YER VEIL OFF, DEARY. "

Polite Little Boy (suffering from repletion) : " OH, PLEASE, MISS, DON'T ASK ME TO HAVE ANY MORE ; I CAN'T SAY NO."

OVERHEARD

He : " YOU 'AVE MY SEAT, MUM."

She : " OH, NO, THANK YOU, I WON'T DEPRIVE YOU OF IT."

He : " IT'S NO DEPRIVITY, MUM."

Hairdresser (with a view to business—to customer, who is getting rapidly bald) :
"THERE ARE PLENTY OF HAIRDRESSERS, YOU KNOW, SIR, WHO PROFESS TO MAKE A WIG ; BUT, WHEN YOU'VE GOT IT ON, IT LOOKS
NOTHING LIKE A WIG AT ALL, SIR."

"COLD" COMFORT

"YOU MUST TAKE CARE OF THAT COLD, MRS. GREEN. YER WANT TO GIT A PENNORTH OF UKERLIPTUS FROM THE CHEMIST, PUT IT IN A JUG OF BOILING WATER, 'OLD YER 'EAD OVER IT, AND IGNORE IT."

Servant (rebuked for bringing in a dirty cup) : " FUNNY THING, MUM, I ALWAYS SEEM TO HIT UPON THIS ONE WHEN YOU HAVE COMPANY."

OVER-FED!

Mrs. Green : "THE ONLY THING SHE FANCIED WAS A EGG. I 'APPENED TO 'AVE ONE ABOUT ME, SO I GIVE IT 'ER, AND AFTER SHE'D 'AD IT SHE LOOKED—ER——"

Mrs. Smith : "BETTER?"

Mrs. Green : "WELL, SHE SEEMED FATTER IN THE FACE."

George Blinck

Earnest Lady : " OF COURSE I UNDERSTAND MEN MUST DRINK WHILE DOING SUCH HOT AND HEAVY WORK. BUT MUST IT BE BEER ? CAN'T THEY DRINK WATER ? "

Mechanic : " YES, LADY, THEY CAN DRINK WATER, BUT (confidentially) IT MAKES 'EM SO GIDDY."

Absent-minded Pedagogue : " PADDINGTON, THIRD PERSON, SINGULAR, PLEASE."

THE LOCAL TOUCH

East Anglian : "TELL YOW WHAT THAT IS, SIR : THAT THERE KAISER 'E 'ONT NEVER BE SATISFIED UNTIL 'E'S RUINED MUD-BOROUGH."

First Neighbour : " AN' WOT DID YOU S'Y ? "

Second ditto : " I KEP' ME DIGNITY, MRS. 'ARRIS. ' PIG ! ' I SEZ, AN' SWEP' OUT. "

OVERHEARD

"Yus, it 'AS TURNED COLD. WHEN I COME OUT THIS MORNING I SEZ TO MESELF, 'SHALL I PUT ME FURS ON OR NOT.' I'M GLAD I DID NOW."

THE MUSKETRY INSTRUCTRESS

Mrs. Green (a well-informed lady, speaking of her son, a new recruit): "I SAYS TO FRED, 'YOU BE CAREFUL,' I SAYS; 'IF YER GUN 'URTS YER SHOULDER LIKE THAT, ME BOY, W'EN YER SHOOTING A 'UNDRED YARDS, W'AT'S IT GOIN' TO DO W'EN YER SHOOTIN' A THOUSAND?'"

AT THE COSTUMIERS

"OH, YES, SHE'S SMART, BUT SHE HASN'T AN IDEA IN HER VOCABULARY."

"YEW MARK MY WORDS, MRS. PIPSQUEAK—'E'LL BE CAUGHTED, THAT THERE PROFITEERIN' BUTCHER O' MINE, SURE 'NOUGH. 'E CHARGES ME THE SAME FOR MEAT AS IF I 'ADN'T GIVEN 'IM NO COUPON FOR IT."

"IF YOU PUT YER EAR TO THE GROUND YOU CAN HEAR THEM FIRING AWAY UP TO SQUIRE JENKINS."
"WOT, WITH THE NAKED EAR?"

FROM MUDSHIRE

First Native : " I 'EAR THE KAISER HAS AGED TEN YEARS SINCE THE WAR STARTED."

Second Native : " AN' I THART IT'S ONLY BIN ON VOUR MONTHS, JARGE."

QUI S'EXCUSE S'ACCUSE

" I THOUGHT YOU WERE COMING TO SIT FOR ME YESTERDAY ? "

" I WAS, SIR ; BUT TO TELL YOU THE TRUTH, SIR, I WENT OUT WITH SOME PALS THE NIGHT BEFORE AND I WAS A BIT SHAKY, SO I THOUGHT AS I'D COME OUT BLURRED, SIR."

A LITTLE DIFFERENCE

Sporting Friend : " HAD A FINE DAY HUNTIN' YESTERDAY, GEORGE ; FORTY MINUTES WITHOUT A CHECK. "
Well-known Actor : " THAT'S NOTHING, DEAR BOY ; I'VE BEEN FORTY WEEKS WITHOUT ONE. "

First Flapper : " THE CHEEK OF THAT CONDUCTOR ! HE GLARED AT ME AS IF I HADN'T PAID ANY FARE."

Second Flapper : " AND WHAT DID YOU DO ? "

First Flapper " I JUST GLARED BACK AT HIM—AS IF I HAD ! "

Old Lady : " YOU GOT PECKHAM ON THE 'BUS !"

Conductor " WE GOT JESTLE'S MILK ON THE 'BUS. BUT WE DON'T GO TO SWITZERLAND."

Grocer : " NOW, MY MAN, THE BUTTER YOU BROUGHT US LAST WEEK—EVERY PACKET OF IT WEIGHED ONLY FIFTEEN OUNCES."

Farmer's Man : " WULL, TO BE SURE, SIR, WE'D LOST OUR ONE-POUND WEIGHT; BUT WE TOOK ONE OF YOUR POUND PACKETS OF TEA TO WEIGH IT WITH."

A FINE COUGH

Young Visitor from London (to old lady) : "THAT'S THE SORT OF COUGH YOU'VE GOT, IF YOU WERE ON THE UNDERGROUND THEY MIGHT MAKE YOU PAY FORTY SHILLINGS."

AFTER SATURDAY NIGHT!

The Parson : " WELL, JOHN, I WAS GLAD TO SEE YOU AT CHURCH ON SUNDAY."

The Village Toper : " LAWS, PARSON, WAS THAT WHERE I WERE ? "

PLAYING FOR SAFETY

"YOU'RE LOOKING VERY POORLY, MRS. SMAIE."

"YES, MUM, I'VE BEEN TO SEE THE DOCTOR, BUT 'E'S AWAY ON 'IS HOLIDAYS, SO I MUST WAIT TILL HE COMES BACK. I WOULDN'T THINK OF HAVING THE LOCAL DEMONS."

George H. Butler

THE REASON WHY!

He: "'I NEVER 'EARD SUCH A NAME TO CALL THE CHILD AS OCTAPUS,' I SEZ. 'BECOS 'E'S THE EIGHTH,' 'E SEZ—THAT'S WOT COMES OF THIS 'ERE LEARNIN'!"

THE PESSIMIST!

"I'VE 'AD 'ER VACCINATED AND I'VE 'AD 'ER CONFIRMED, BUT NOTHINK DON'T SEEM TO CHEER 'ER UP!"

Gentleman (in favour of National work for everyone) : "AND WHY SHOULDN'T PEOPLE BE DOING TO-DAY WHAT THEY NEVER DREAMED OF DOING BEFORE THE WAR ? "

New Assistant (his first operation) : "EXACTLY, SIR. ALL THE SAME, IF ANYBODY HAD TOLD ME TWO DAYS AGO THAT I SHOULD NOW BE CUTTING THE HAIR OF A COMPLETE STRANGER, I'D NEVER HAVE BELIEVED 'IM."

Sam B. Baker

PUSSYFOOT!

"YUS, SHE IS LIKE THAT—VERY MOODY, YER KNOW. NOW THIS MORNIN' SHE 'URRIED AFTER ME AND COME UP QUITE PLEASANT, BUT WHEN SHE SEED IT WAS MILK IN ME JUG, SHE TURNED NASTY."

THE CAMOUFLAGE

Gentleman (making up) : "THIS IS THE BEST GREASE PAINT I'VE STRUCK LATELY."
Second Gentleman : "THAT'S WORTH KNOWING ; WHOSE IS IT ?"
First Gentleman : "I DON'T KNOW HIS NAME ; IT'S A CHAP THAT'S ON IN THE FIRST ACT."

THICK OR THIN

Hairdresser : " YOUR HAIR'S VERY THIN ON THE TOP, SIR."

Customer : " AH, I'M GLAD OF THAT ; I HATE FAT HAIR."
